Breakdown of Funding

- 1). The program is fully funded, contingent upon students maintaining a CGPA of at least 2.5/4.0 per semester to continue benefiting from the scholarship.
- 2). All scholarship recipients will receive a monthly allowance of $1,600 throughout their study duration, provided they meet the departmental CGPA requirements.
- 3). Accommodations will be shared, with two individuals per room for singles and one per room for married couples, respecting same-sex arrangements.
- 4). A one-way economy flight to Bolivia will be reimbursed (once) along with a return flight ticket (economy class).
- 5). 60% coverage of national health insurance, inclusive of annual medical check-ups, will be provided.
- 6). MS students involved in research projects requiring primary data collection will be offered a research assistantship of $1,000.
- 7). Reimbursement for any application or acceptance fee remitted to the Bolivian university extending an offer of admission.

Language of Instruction

- 1). The primary language of instruction for all courses will be English.
- 2). English will be the sole language utilized for oral and written assessments, course evaluations, projects, theses, and dissertations.
- 3). However, to facilitate effective communication with locals, enhance mobility, and provide a richer experience of Bolivian culture, a 2-month language class will be offered from September 2, 2024, to November 2, 2024, on Mondays through Fridays.
- 4). While attendance in language classes is optional, participating students will receive $1,000 per month for the two months (with estimated payments on September 29th and October 29th).
- 5). Students resuming their studies after September 10, 2024, and enrolling in the language class will only qualify for the October $1,000 language bonus.
- 6). Students resuming their studies after October 10, 2024, and registering for the language class may attend the classes but will not receive any language bonuses.
- 7). To qualify for the language class bonus, a student must not be absent for more than three language classes.
- 8). Students attending the language classes will have the option to include their final assessment grade on their official transcripts.

Communication and Student Email

At the Universidad Tecnológica Juan Misael Saracho, Bolivia, each student is assigned an institutional email address in the format FirstnameMiddlename.surname@utmjsedu.com.bo, known as the official student email address. Before arriving in Bolivia, all correspondence will be sent to the primary email address provided during the application process, with the official student email address included in the copy (cc). Upon arrival in Bolivia, it is mandatory for all communication between students, lecturers, and staff to be conducted exclusively through the official student email address. Any information related to visa procedure, student scholarships and renewal, will be communicated via international-scholarship@mozidafoundation.org. Staff members from Universidad Tecnológica Juan Misael Saracho, Bolivia utilize the email address of the form email@utmjsedu.com.bo to communicate with students, whether it is for general announcements such as lecture schedules, exams, and events, or for specific matters related to individual students, such as documents pertaining to their previous studies or instructions for specific tasks like attendance sheets. It is imperative for students to regularly monitor their official student email address for important updates and information. Failure to do so may result in missing out on crucial notifications and announcements. Therefore, students should make it a habit to check their email regularly and respond promptly to any communications from lecturers and staff to ensure smooth academic and administrative processes.
